The CNA requirement of 0 at section 8.2.1 used again to state that no new dwellings should be built. It does not prevent further housing development taking place, subject to accordance with policies in the NDP, the CLP and the NPPF, including those conserving and enhancing the nationally designated AONB. However, the 0 target also means there is not a necessity through the NDP to specifically plan for further growth, such as through land allocations on the edge of our settlements.

Some NDP groups have provided settlement boundaries and others have not. If a boundary is to be set, this would involve settlement edge assessments, and detailed analysis of where the built area of the settlement stops, and the open countryside commences. We considered that the definitions of what infill and rounding off development are, as outlined in the CLP, are clear already, and a settlement boundary would not add any material benefit to the NDP and the application of policies within it, the CLP and the NPPF.

		Non-Designated Heritage Assets (NDHA)	(10 Consultation Comments)
		Many comments were clearly concerned by the use of the term "list". All negative commentators received a follow-up email to clarify Cornwall Council advice on the rationale for their entry in the ndha schedule. This is shown in the next column.	"The identification of the properties as non-designated heritage assets actually isn't the same thing as a local list, the properties are not listed and this doesn't bring about extra planning restrictions. All it does is highlight that this is one of the non-designated heritage assets that the community locally value. Non-designated heritage assets are already referred to in national and local strategic policy and already the requirement is not to cause harm to them. The NDP is highlighting that this is one of the structures that are valued - but without this specific reference a planning officer could still apply their judgement and say that this is a non-designated heritage asset. Only the Local Planning Authority (i.e. Cornwall Council) can designate a local list, although NDPs can and do propose assets for that."

		role of the hotel should be a primary consideration in any designation. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • We have not followed national policy guidance and established criteria. • Local interest is insubstantial – most interest stems from tourism. The gardens are not demonstrably special to the local community. • There is no free public access or visibility. Accepts that the former is not essential in determining the designation but cites recent contested cases where designations ignored the ability of access by the public and proved highly contentious. • The designation places an undue burden on the hotel business. It does not complement investment in local business and the promotion of jobs. • Our plan does not positively seek opportunities to meet the development needs of our community in housing or in addressing social, economic and environmental priorities. • Additional protection of the gardens beyond the AONB designation is not necessary. Has the test of additional local benefit been applied? • The proposed designation indirectly conflicts with a positive strategy for 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The issue could be left to the examiner to decide but that approach risks further argument and collapse of the entire NDP at an extremely late stage. • A “strategic withdrawal” on the grounds of potentially restricting the business’s ability to maintain the gardens was discussed. Those in the SG with a law background supported this approach. • The Leader of the Environment & Heritage Working Group wished it to be placed on public record that the inclusion of the gardens in LGS listing should stand due to its historical and botanical links. Some paring of the map could diminish the hotel’s concern about restrictive planning effects of LGS designation. Action: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The SG could not arrive at a clear decision. The Chair would write to the Parish Council seeking their guidance as to the local importance of the gardens and how the SG should proceed.
